

THIRTYTHIRD YEAR

LANCASTER, KY., THURSDAY AFTERNOON, JUNE 22, 1922.

NUMBER 11.

MUCH INTEREST

Shown at Last Meeting of
Chamber of Commerce
Election of Officers Friday Night

A goodly number of the members attended the meeting of the Chamber of Commerce last Friday evening and some very important business taken up and some just as important disposed of. The referendum committee reported the following nominations from the eighty-two ballots cast for the various officers which are to be elected by ballot next Friday night at the court house.

Those to be voted upon at this meeting are: For President, J. E. Stormes, W. A. Farnau and R. L. Elkin; for Vice-President, R. L. Elkin, G. R. Swinebroad, and A. D. Joseph; for directors, R. L. Elkin, G. R. Swinebroad, J. W. Elmore, Chas. Thompson, H. S. Hudson, Billie Miller, J. M. Farra, W. A. Farnau, J. E. Stormes, V. G. Kinnaird and A. D. Joseph.

After the election of a president and vice-president, three directors will be named from the above list. It is to be hoped that the membership will turn out next Friday night at the election of the officers, which is one of the most important meetings of the year and show to the officers-elect that you are co-operating in the work of the Chamber of Commerce, which could mean so much to Lancaster and Garrard county; but without such co-operation very little can be accomplished.

The election will be in charge of the following committee, which was named last Friday night: L. G. Davidson, chairman, E. C. Gaines and Joe Price.

The Chamber of Commerce went on record as endorsing the Redpath Chautauqua and the continuance of this interesting series of summer entertainments.

It also unanimously endorsed the work of Miss Joyce Syler, as Garrard county's Demonstration Agent and the secretary was requested to write a letter to Miss Syler, assuring her that this organization approved of the educational work which she is conducting throughout the county.

Members of the Chamber of Commerce, contributing to the cost of two students at the College of Agriculture during Junior week, June 19th to 24th are as follows: A. D. Joseph, Haselden Bros., Kinnaird Bros., W. A. Dickerson, L. G. Davidson, Garrard Milling Co., A. H. Bastin and Co., Hudson and Farnau, E. C. Gaines, S. F. Hughes, John M. Farra, J. R. Kinnaird, Virgil Kinnaird, Conn Bros., J. M. McRoberts, J. W. Elmore, Bastin Lumber Co., F. B. Marksbury, J. A. Amon, G. R. Swinebroad and A. T. Sanders.

It is indeed gratifying to see such encouragement given to an educational opportunity of this nature by the business men of Lancaster and Garrard county. In addition to this co-operation, the Central Record is making it possible for another student to enjoy this same course, and the Club Department of the Reynolds Tobacco Co. is supplying the means for a fourth pupil.

Mr. Duncan Haselden is to be congratulated upon his progressiveness and desire to absorb all the knowledge possible during the same period as a result of his own initiative.

PUBLIC SQUARE
PROPERTY

To be Sold at Auction Friday Afternoon

What will probably be the last opportunity one will have again soon, is to buy public square property at public auction, but this chance will be offered to some enterprising progressive person, when the Tomlinson property in the northwest side of the public square will be sold by the Garrard Bank and Trust Company, administrators of the estate, tomorrow, (Friday) afternoon at four o'clock.

This property is ideally located and susceptible for a business house, hall, or other usage, having it is true only about fifteen feet frontage on the square, yet this entrance could be made attractive, as an arcade, leading to the main entrance of the hall or stores which runs back the depth of 100 feet or more. It is a great opportunity for some business enterprise to be opened right on the square, where property has always been in so much demand. The present buildings have useful material in them and the valuable grounds upon which they stand should find a ready sale tomorrow afternoon, when it will be offered publicly.

It is to be hoped that this property will fall into the hands of some public spirited citizens, and a building erected there that will be a credit to the town and prove a profitable investment for its owners.

Mothers
Call For Your Conference Cards

The mothers are urged to get the conference cards as soon as possible. They will be at Dickerson's store and may be had if they will call there for them.

Although the babies were fine specimens of Kentucky's best crop, many defects were found on careful examinations. Another year, if such a conference is held, it is hoped that even more parents will avail themselves of the opportunity of having their babies given the once over.

The Shepherd Towner Bill, passed by the last Legislature gives $40,000.00 to be spent on the "Infant Soldiers" of this State. Garrard county should get its share and see to it that the money is well expended.

Beazley

Boy Stewart Beazley, who lived many years in Garrard county, where he was born and for a number of years a resident of Lincoln, died at his home in Mt. Vernon last Monday morning, the result of an operation two months previous, for hernia. While his death was rather sudden, for he had been confined to his bed for several months, his immediate family were not prepared for his sudden demise. He leaves a wife and several children. He is also survived by his mother, Mrs. Mildred Beazley, of this city, two brothers, James A. Beazley, also of this city, J. L. Beazley, of Stanford and two sisters, Mrs. Will Hays of Stanford and Mrs. Walter Beazley, of Los Angeles, Calif.

The deceased is well remembered here and his death will be read with deep regret by those who knew him personally. Burial took place in the family lot in the Lancaster cemetery Tuesday afternoon.

PEDALED 700 MILES

Vincent Arnold and Forest
Carlisle Reached Here
Tuesday From Birmingham

The Birmingham News of June 6th, contained a picture of two young Roy Scouts, Messrs. Vincent Arnold and Forest Carlisle, ready to mount their wheels, which would start them on their journey of 700 miles from that city to Lancaster. After traveling 14 days and taking in many of the sights along the way, they arrived at the home of Mr. Arnold's grand-parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. G. Burns last Tuesday morning, none the worse for their long journey, and thoroughly enthusiastic over the trip, which brought them many experiences neither had ever encountered before in their young lives.

Vincent is a son of Mr. and Mrs. J. V. Arnold, of Birmingham and his young friend, Forest Carlisle, is a brother boy scout, and they conceived the idea of motoring through on their wheels, and taking in many of the sights along their way, which they did and enjoyed to the limit. Chief among the places of interest visited was the famous Mammoth Cave and they spent a day and night there. Other points touched were Decatur, Gallatin, Nashville, Scottsville, Greensboro, Bowling Green, Lebanon, Danville and on to Lancaster.

Ruling Affecting Bleached Flour

New York, June 12.—The Board of Health has announced a ruling that after Aug. 31 no flour bleached with any chemical agent or product made from such flour shall be "brought into, held, kept, sold or offered for sale," in this city unless labeled "bleached," with the name of the chemical agent also on the label.—Milling and Grain News, St. Louis.

Many of the large city's Board of Health are making war on bleached and chemical cured flour. While it helps the appearance of the flour it destroys the food values. We are protecting you by offering you only pure, unbleached, wheat flour.

Don't Forget

All democrats should bear in mind that July 10 and 11 will be registration days and that every democrat in every precinct in every county will have to register in order to vote in the future. If you fail to register you will lose your vote. Democrats are urged to begin now to advertise this important matter. Every time you meet a democrat remind him of the two days. Polls will be open in each precinct in the county just the same as on election day. When you register once you do not have to register again unless you move from the precinct. Don't forget this.

Senator Ernst

Offers Bill

A Washington dispatch says: A bill was introduced by Senator Richard P. Ernst, Republican, of Kentucky, recently intended to give greater freedom of action to the prohibition enforcement office and to remove it from the control of the internal revenue commissioner and the secretary of the treasury. The measure, if passed, would make the office an independent establishment, answered early to the President. Prohibition enforcement is not regarded as a source of revenue and many believe it should not be under the internal revenue bureau, Senator Ernst said in introducing the bill.

Fight Law For
Pure Elections

Judge Chas. A. Hardin Expresses Amusement at The Course of Republican Organization

Republican action to test the new Registration Law, expected to be initiated in the Franklin Circuit Court was interpreted as a fear of clean elections by Judge Chas. A. Hardin, Chairman of the Democratic State Central and Executive Committees.

"It is passing strange," said Judge Hardin, "that a duly organized political body would institute a suit to test a law that seeks to purify elections. The registration law has for its sole purpose clean elections. It contains no partisan provisions whatever. It imposes exactly the same conditions on all political parties playing no favorites.

"It strikes the Democratic leadership that any party which is afraid of this law must object to clean elections.

"I am amazed that the Republican party would put itself on record as fighting a law designed to bring an honest election. The only criticisms of the law that I have heard were that it would cause inconvenience or cost something for its administration. No one of responsibility has accused it of being partisan. Anyone who reads it can see that it can't be used by either organization in a selfish way. Any organization which puts itself on record as opposing electrical machinery which insure pure elections is doomed to fail.

"Under the State-wide registration law no longer the groups of repeaters can be swung from poll to poll; from county to county; from State to State in border counties, to create artificial and corrupt majorities. No longer can the transients and families who are not entitled to vote secure the privilege through corrupt election officers. No longer can the corruptions, by use of unlimited corruption funds, be effective as under the old law. No longer can the unnaturalized citizen vote in the mining camps of Kentucky. The registration law is not for the benefit of either party but to bring about clean and pure elections.

"In my opinion this law is one of the most progressive laws ever enacted by the Legislature in our State. It renders possible the enactment of all progressive laws which are concurred in by the majority opinion of the electorate, and thereby secures a foundation of justice consistent with Democratic principle and the certain support of the people."—Louisville Post.

July 1st Membership's
Day

The preamble of the American Legion's constitution states that it is dedicated to God and Country. The Legion, during its career of only three years has demonstrated that it is the best insurance policy the nation has.

Our post appeals to all eligible ex-service men in this community to join the Legion and to aid our fight for Americanism. The blue and gold button of the American Legion marks its wearer as one who has not thrown away his patriotism with the uniform. It means that he has not "passed the buck" to someone else to see that the sick and disabled buddies get justice and to fulfill all those things that he desired to result from the war.

Every man in the service hoped for better things after the war. More than two million doughboys, gobs and gyrenes realized that it was going to be a fight to bring to pass all the things that they dreamed of. The result of this prevailing sentiment was the formation of the American Legion.

Legion members are from every branch in the service, from those who were forced to remain at home to men who won the congressional medal at Chateau-Thierry and in the Argonne. It included all ranks from private to general.

Our Legion post can be the most beneficial organization in this county. Its purposes are high its ideals are untarnished. It deserves your support and membership of every war veteran. Join Heidel Sanford post of the American Legion and make it the best post in your State.

Commander Heidel Sanford

CONGRESSMAN
GILBERT

Announces Candidacy for Democratic Nomination
Will Have No Party Opposition

Congressman Ralph Gilbert, of Shelbyville, at present the able representative of the Eighth Congressional District, announces his candidacy for the Democratic nomination for Congress and we feel safe in saying that he will have no opposition from the democratic party for this nomination. Congressman Gilbert has made a splendid record in Washington and his work there should and will be endorsed by the party and his re-nomination assured. Mr. Gilbert is now in Kentucky looking after the registration of the democratic voters, which is to take place July 10th and 11th, and in a letter to the Central Record sets out many reasons why this registration law is a good one and believes its operation will go a long way toward the purity of the ballot which should be kept inviolate.

His letter is of interest to every voter in Garrard county and we reproduce it in full:

Shelbyville, Ky.
June 16, 1922.

The Central Record,
Lancaster, Ky.

My dear Mr. Elkin:

I have sent in today to the Secretary of State my notification and declaration as a candidate for Congress on the democratic ticket. While I do not anticipate any democratic opposition, I wish to announce my candidacy in the newspapers also, as they are the great bearers of news and thought.

The press of the district has at all times since my induction into office treated me with uniform fairness and consideration, in fact, it has been more complimentary than my services deserved. I am inclosing my check for $15, the charge as I understand it.

I believe the press like public officials by reason of their opportunities carry a public duty, and in this connection permit me to suggest that wide publicity should be given to the Act of the last legislature requiring all voters to register. As it only operates once and as the purity of the ballot should be kept inviolate, it is highly proper that all qualified voters of the State should for once be ascertained and put on such record that both parties and all citizens could see whether or not elections have been properly held. Recently when a democratic candidate for senator received more than 40,000 majority in ten districts and was defeated by the majority in the remaining district suspicion naturally was aroused.

This law should have the purpose of correcting the abuse, if there was an abuse or quieting the slanders of the ballot in that district if they were slanderous. The public should be not only informed that there is such a law, but the reason for it. It is no use for us to vote if elsewhere a majority will be manufactured simply to overcome it. You will pardon this long letter but it is more in the nature of a communication to the press, which in after all, the only way that the general public can be informed as to such matters of great importance. With kind personal regards, I am,

Sincerely,
Ralph Gilbert.

Cowpeas Supply Big Needs of Poor Soils

The cowpea is one of the best crops that can be grown to supply nitrogen and organic matter, the two things needed most by poor soils of Kentucky, soils and crops specialists of the College of Agriculture say. Unlike other legumes, such as alfalfa and clover, the peas make a fair growth on poor, sour soils without either limestone or other fertilizers although a light application of limestone and some phosphate fertilizer helps them make a better growth. The peas are especially valuable as a soil improvement crop because they may be seeded by being broadcasted and therefore need no cultivation.

In using the peas for soil improvement, many farmers seed them as a catch crop after wheat, oats or rye. Seeded at this late date, the crop makes considerable vine growth which is valuable for forage and fertility but which would hardly be sufficient to mature seed.

On other farms, the peas are seeded with success in the corn at the last cultivation, a bushel of seed an acre being sufficient in this case. Some farmers drill the peas in rows between the corn, this method requiring less seed and therefore being advisable when seed prices are high.

The nitrogen gathered by a ton of peas is worth about $8 on the basis of the commercial cost of nitrogen, the specialists point out. Also the hay obtained from the peas is satisfactory feed for all classes of live stock. When the manure resulting from the feeding of the peas is returned to the soil, 20 to 30 pounds of additional nitrogen is added for each ton of peas grown.

When a Nail Loosens Plaster.
When a nail driven in the wall gets loose and the plaster begins to fall off, saturate a bit of cotton with thick glue, wrap as much as possible around the nail and push this back into place pressing hard as possible. This will firmly set the nail in place.

Movements of the Tides.
The spring tides, or tides having the greatest range, occur near the times of new moon and full moon. The neap tides, or tides having the lowest range, occur near the times of first and last quarters of the moon. The highest of the spring tides is from one to two days after new or full moon. At this time, also, the low waters will be lower than usual.

American Legion News

Doughboys, gobs and marines, who attend the American Legion national convention in New Orleans October 16 to 21, may obtain a "bunk" for $1.50 a day, as a result of an agreement between representatives of 7 leading hotels and convention officials.

The hotel men have consented to establish a rate of $1.50 for rooms without baths and $2.50 with baths. This rate is based on a minimum of three persons to the room. If the service man prefers to dwell in solitary grandeur he will pay $4.50 or $7.50, dependent upon whether his room is equipped with a bath.

All reservations for hotel rooms during the five days of the convention will be made through the forty-eight Legion state Adjutants, who will forward the reservations to the hotels and housing committee of the convention.

Some of the most famous hostels in the South are a party to the agreements for reduction in rates. Included in the list are the Grunewald, St. Charles, De Soto, Lafayette, Montelone, Bienville and Planters. Legion officials obtained assurances from all hotel managers that all rooms, excluding those occupied by permanent guests, will be turned over to the convention visitors.

Rest the Eyes.

It's a funny thing, but people never give their eyes a thought unless they have trouble with them. A person couldn't run or walk all day long without giving his legs a rest. A woman couldn't sew all day long without stopping for a few moments to rest her hands. And still people will work their eyes all day without closing them for an instant.

PROBABLY LAST WILD PIGEONS

Killed in Montgomery County;
Colonel Jim Maret Gives
History of Birds

(Lexington Herald)

Probably the last free carrier or wild pigeons in Kentucky, or the world, were killed along the waters of Slate creek, Montgomery county, Kentucky. It was in 1892 when J. H. Kemper was dove hunting that in firing on some doves at the edge of a corn field he killed four or five birds. Two of them were much larger than doves.

On his way home he overtook James Howard, a citizen of Montgomery county, who was 70 years old. On observing the birds which Mr. Kemper had tied to the rear of his saddle, he inquired: "Where did you get those wild pigeons? I have not seen one for the last 20 years." This inquiry was the first intimation to Mr. Kemper that he had slain two of the "grandfathers" to the dove family.

In the year following, Mr. Kemper was dove hunting in the same neighborhood, and sitting side by side on the limb of a tree he observed two birds which resembled doves. He fired upon them and brought them down. On picking them up he discovered they were wild pigeons.

Shortly afterward Mr. Kemper read a worldwide advertisement, published by one of the leading scientific societies (probably the Smithsonian Institution) offering $1,000 for the capture of a pair of wild pigeons. A search over the world failed to find a single pigeon except a pair in captivity which were kept in the Cincinnati Zoo. One of these birds died soon after that date and the other lived up to about 15 years ago and was the last wild pigeon in the world.

Back in the early settlement of Kentucky wild pigeons were so numerous, it is said, they were numbered not in millions, but billions. A Maysville editor relates an instance of Boone having made his escape from the Indians during the flight of untold numbers of these birds. It was at a point near the Ohio river, not far below Cincinnati, that the old hunter came upon an Indian camp from which all the members had gone out on a hunt, leaving in camp only one Indian to look after things there and guard a white boy prisoner.

The Indian guard had gone to sleep and when Boone came into camp he discovered how matters stood. He mentioned to the boy to take a club and dispatch the savage, which the lad did, and assisted Boone in throwing the body into a nearby stream. When this was accomplished they heard the Indian hand returning from the hunt. Finding it impossible to escape into the woods, Boone and the boy took refuge in the matted grape vines trees nearby, which completely concealed them from the enemy. On entering the camp and finding the guard and prisoner missing, an immediate search was begun.

In the meantime, while the freed hunter and companion were observing through vines and foliage the movements of the Redskins, there appeared a flight of myriads of wild pigeons overhead, and in such numbers as to obscure the sun and causing semi-darkness. The old pioneer and the lad climbed from their perch and made their escape without being observed by the foe.

VERY CHEAP

A Man Is Worth Only Ninety-
Eight Cents, Says
Dr. Luden

Ninety-eight cents is figured by Dr. Georgine Luden as the actual value of the "average man," reduced to the elements, as follows:

Fat enough for seven bars of soap.
Iron enough for a medium-sized nail.

Sugar enough to fill a shaker.
Lime enough to whitewash a chicken coop.

Sulphur enough to rid a dog of fleas.

This is no idle or fantastic computation, but a result set forth to show that a scientist thinks it worth while to impress the public with some striking truths in a way made familiar in unscientific demonstrations and incidentally to bring human vanities within proper perspective.

Dr. Luden analyzes the minute units composing some of the ingredients of the human body as revealed by the microscope and by microchemistry in the medical laboratories.

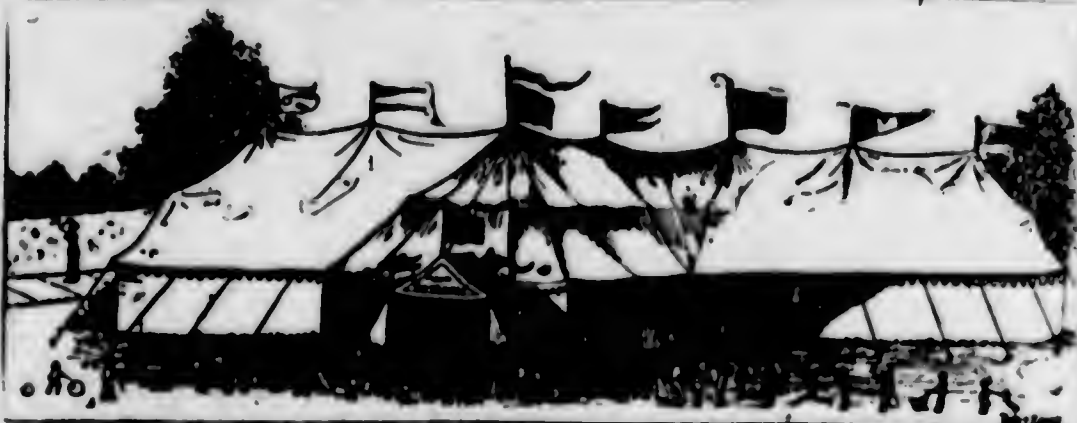

It's difficult to blush upon occasion when the druggist furnishes the complexion.

Ingenious Fraud.

A Paris mail order dealer objected to the raise in postal rates, so in sending out stamped envelopes for reply he covered the stamps with a thin layer of mud. When these came back, he sponged off the cancellation mark and used the stamps over again. Unfortunately for him, postal detectives discovered the ruse and he was fined 2,000 francs, after successfully working the scheme in more than 11,000 instances.

Wylie

The many friends here of Mrs. Rhoda Wylie were deeply grieved, when the news came Monday that her step-son, Mr. William Wylie, of Madison, had passed into the Great Beyond. His death is unusually sad as he was just in the prime of manhood, being 28 years of age. He had been ill for several weeks and his death was not unexpected. He was married about five years ago to Miss Anna Boone Ballard, of Madison who survived him. Mrs. Wylie has the sympathy of every one in her bereavement. Besides his wife and mother, he is survived by one half-sister, Miss Ethel Wylie and two half-brothers, Messrs. Earl and Edwin Wylie, who is now in such a serious condition. The interment was in the Richmond cemetery Tuesday at 11 o'clock. Mr. Wylie was well known and very popular and will be greatly missed in the community where he lived.

Wylie

The community is deeply shocked and his friends and acquaintances are saddened, by the death of Edwin Wylie, who passed away at his home here, Wednesday morning, at 5:30 o'clock, after a lingering illness of many months. He was twenty-two years old last February 1st, and was a son of Mrs. Rhoda Wylie, of this place. One sister, Miss Ethel Wylie and one brother, Earl, also survive. For quite a while he had been in the garage business with his brother and was an energetic young business man, exceedingly popular and well liked. His passing brings double sorrow to the bereaved mother, who during the week had lost a step-son, notice of which appears in this column.

Funeral services were conducted this Thursday afternoon at two o'clock at the residence, by his pastor, Rev. A. P. Jones, of the Methodist church of which he was a devoted member for the past fifteen years. Interment in the Lancaster cemetery.

Government chemists are now working out a means of producing a cheap fuel for motor car from corn cobs, and are said to be meeting with gratifying success.

It is doubtful, however, if it will ever be placed on the market where the users of motor cars can take advantage of it at reduced cost. The oil and gasoline interests are too rich and powerful to ever allow such disastrous competition with their industry to exist.

Periodically we hear such reports, and motorists become enthused over the possibility of cheaper fuel for their engines.

Then the project goes the way of its predecessors—possibly through strangulation—and the public continues to line the pockets of the oil barons.

The great American throat is not so parched as it was. It is becoming wetter every day.

Statistics from Washington state that in 1921 every man, woman and child in the United States consumed an average of forty-nine gallons of milk, or nearly a gallon a week per capita.

That is encouraging. It is also disheartening—to those who would abolish prohibition.

A nation that consumes a gallon of milk a week per person will surely not suffer to any great extent as a result of that "terrible thirst."

In time it may become corrupt—eventually.

The flapper has had a great run for her money.

She has been the observed of all observers, the admired of all admirers, and the cursed of all cursers.

She flapped herself into fame and now she is on the verge of flapping herself into oblivion.

But there's a reason.

Americans like sensations—those that are spicy, but brief. We haven't the time to pursue any one sensation to a great length. There are too many others waiting to edge in.

The flapper was a sensation—for a time. But she flapped so strenuously, in session and out, that she became wearisome to the public, and now she is about to become a nuisance. Soon she will be flapping only for her own admiration.

But she was quite worth while. She furnished us a few thrills, and was the object of many jests—all of which is necessary in the average American day.

We will bid her adieu with-out regret.

But, Lord! What will we get next?

Laws are made for the protection of the people who live under them.

If a law is a good one it should be enforced. No favor should be shown, either to the rich or the poor, to the powerful or to the insignificant. If it is not a good law it should be repealed.

We have too many laws that are dead letters. They are only resurrected when some crusty cuss wants to satisfy a grudge, or some prosecutor wants to make a safe splurge. At other times they are disregarded with impunity.

This condition is well known to the public, and even to the younger generation just merging into manhood. It is not conducive to respect for either law or order. It is a breeder of evasion and is the father of contempt.

We need fewer laws, but we need good ones that are enforced.

Make It Fifty-Fifty

A well known labor leader advocates the elimination of strikes and strong arm tactics in the settlement of disputes with employers. He remarks justly, that the public is tired of them, and that when an organization gets in Dutch with the people it is in a bad way. The laborer is worthy of a just hire—no more, and no less.

The brain that directs is worthy of a just compensation—no more, and no less.

Neither side has a right to assume a "dog in the manger" attitude, nor have they the right to rob the buying public to fatten themselves.

The only effective remedy for this condition of affairs lies in the hands of congress and the government.

There are too many swollen incomes in this country. This condition is made possible by combinations in restraint of trade and by profiteering in the form of extravagant price boosting.

These matters should be regulated by law, and the penalty for violations should not be in the form of fines. The guilty should be sent to jail.

And in order that punishment may be swift and sure, the public official who fails to prosecute should himself be sent to jail for shirking his sworn duty.

These may seem like harsh measures, but they are the only ones that will prevail.

Labor leaders will continue to order strikes as long as employers continue to gouge the public and put all of the spoils in their own pocket.

Eliminate gouging and strike a fifty-fifty basis of settlement and strikes will be a thing of the past.

Do you invest your savings in bonds? If so, buy only gilt edged ones from substantial houses and then hold onto them. Don't become uneasy and unload the moment they go down a few points on the market. A bond that is worth having will pay par at maturity, and in the meantime it pays the interest provided for on its face. Speculators force them down and then buy them up in large quantities.

They get the gravy while you get the experience.

Up To France

Chaos must reign in Europe for another period of time.

The international bankers of the world, with J. P. Morgan at their head, have ruled against extending a loan to Germany without first having the war reparations placed at a figure which Germans will be able to meet without completely wrecking their industries and reducing the population to absolute poverty and slavery.

Every nation concerned agreed to and advocated a revision of the reparations figures except France. She refused, and by her refusal the loan was blocked.

In demanding her pound of flesh to the last ounce, when a reasonable concession would have meant the rehabilitation of stricken Europe, herself included, France has made the mistake of her life, one which will cost her dearly in the end.

Had she agreed to a revision of the reparations the European situation would have been rapidly cleared up through the action of the bankers in financing a readjustment and the consequent return to industrial and commercial prosperity.

This improvement would have extended to America and every other distant country. The whole world would have shared in the beneficial results.

France, it would seem, is so blinded with passion she cannot see the handwriting on the wall, although it is plain to every other nation under the sun.

If she persists in her present course, to the detriment of the entire world, the day may come when she will have to fight Germany again, but she will fight alone. There will be no foreign armies sent to her relief, as was done in the last war. Other nations will not care to sacrifice their sons to aid a nation that is too stubborn to aid itself.

In three months the international bankers will meet again. The French have yet time in which to redeem themselves—if they will.

Idle Men and Idle Land

In this country there are millions of acres of excellent land that has never felt the bite of a plow. This land is capable of feeding many millions of people, although it is feeding none.

In every city in the country there are large numbers of people who would welcome a return to the farm if such could be effected. Generally they are men of families who have been brought up on the farm but left in their younger days to "make their fortunes in the city," and are now marooned there as effectually as if stranded on a desert island.

It cost money to change from a crowded city to virgin land and convert the soil into a productive farm. And money they have not—at least not sufficient for the transformation.

If the government could devise some means of placing such families on unused land and aid them to the point where they could become self sustaining and pay off their indebtedness it would work a wonderful change in this country.

Of course it would in time reduce the price of farm products because of the great increase in production. This, however, would automatically reduce living expenses, and that would bring down the cost of labor, and production would become less expensive, and wholesale and retail prices would be lowered in proportion.

In other words, there would be a general reduction in the price of everything throughout the country.

We lose a tremendous amount of foreign trade for the simple reason that our cost of production is so great that we find it difficult to compete in world markets with other countries whose people are not living at so rapid and expensive a pace. This reduction in foreign trade, together with the rapid and constant influx of immigrants from abroad, produces stagnation in our labor markets and creates our armies of the unemployed.

There should be a general reduction of all prices of every nature, beginning with the man at the top, who can best afford it, and ending with the one at the bottom, who can least afford it.

It is useless to ask one element of our population to suffer a reduction in revenue while other elements continue to rake in their exorbitant profits. That is both unfair and foolhardy, because it leads to unrest and trouble.

There can never be any great reduction in table costs as long as a great portion of the land remains untitled and those who are at present working the farms are compelled to pay excessive prices for everything they use.

A careful and honestly administered system of governmental aid to those who desire to return to the farms and become definite producers would go a long way toward solving the most difficult problem now facing the American people.

SANDERS BROS. & J. M. AMON, PROP.
LANCASTER, KY.Limit To Economical
Use of Molasses To Fatten Steers

That there is a limit to the quantity of blackstrap molasses which can be added with economy to a ration of 5.4 pounds of cottonseed meal and 46 pounds of corn silage for fattening yearling steers was shown in a test made by the United States Department of Agriculture in co-operation with the Louisiana Experiment Station.

Two lots of nine 700-pound steers were fed for 112 days. Forty-six pounds of silage per steer per day was practically the limit of their capacity. Lot 1 was fed 5.42 pounds of molasses per steer daily, while lot 2 was fed 8.07 pounds of molasses per steer daily. As lot 1 gained 2.48 pounds per steer daily, while lot 2 gained only 2.01 pounds per steer daily, it is evident that 2.65 pounds of molasses was wasted daily per steer in lot 2. The results in lot 2 might have been more favorable to the use of so much molasses had the cottonseed-meal ration been reduced to 3.5 or 4 pounds. In the test, lot 1 consumed 1,880 pounds of silage, 218 pounds of cottonseed meal, and 218 pounds of molasses per 100 pounds gain, while lot 2 required 2 per cent more silage, 3 per cent more cottonseed meal, and 54 per cent more molasses to produce 100 pounds of gain.

Bob-White An Enemy
of Corn Rootworm

The bob-white eats the adults or beetles of the corn rootworm which lay the eggs that later become larvae or worms and infest the corn. As many as 12 of the beetles, according to the Bureau of Entomology of the United States Department of Agriculture, have been found in the stomach of one bob-white. The red-headed woodpecker, nighthawk, cardinal, kingbird and phoebe also eat the beetles and reduce the damage done by the Southern corn rootworm.

Silage Mixtures

Tested For Steers In The South

To get results economically most cattle feeders should use some kind of silage in the rations, says the United States Department of Agriculture. Steers fed on silage usually not only make more economical gains, shrink less, and make more profits than steers fed on dry roughage, but also make it possible to utilize crops grown primarily in a ration for restoring the fertility of worn-out lands.

The comparative value of a number of different silage crops for steer feeding was recently worked out by the department in co-operation with the Louisiana Experiment Station. In one instance similar lots of cattle were fed a ration of cottonseed meal and blackstrap molasses in combination with corn silage, corn and Illinois soy-bean silage, sorghum silage, sorghum and Illinois soy-bean silage, and Japanese cane and Illinois soy-bean silage.

The best gain was made by the steers fed the straight corn silage, but it was shown that the capacity of a farm for fattening or wintering cattle may be greatly increased by the use of heavy-yielding silage crops such as sorghum and Japanese cane. Immature Illinois soy beans mixed with corn or sorghum were not so satisfactory, but with late-maturing crops like Japanese cane these silages gave very good results. Sorghum silage and Japanese cane and Illinois soy-bean silage are practically equal in feeding value for steers when supplemented by cottonseed meal and molasses.

TEACHERS SALARY
SCHEDULEGarrard County, Kentucky
For School Year, 1922-23

The salary schedule must be made by the County Board of Education and submitted in duplicate to the State Board of Education for approval, by the State Board before teachers' contracts are made; and an approved schedule must be in effect before any payments are made to teachers.

No teacher can be legally employed who does not hold at the time of his employment a proper legal certificate which will not expire during the term for which he is employed.

The first 25c of the county school levy must be devoted exclusively to supplementing teachers' salaries, or as much of it as is needed to meet the salary schedule and the minimum salary law. In those counties where the 25c levy when added to the state per capita is not sufficient to meet the minimum salary law, the county board may pay a lower salary than the legal minimum.

Salaries in no county ought to be uniform, but the salary paid should have a direct relation to the teacher's preparation and experience.

This salary schedule must be kept posted in the county superintendent's office, and must be published in the local paper. It must be made the basis and a part of the teacher's contract.

The salaries of all teachers employed by the county board of education, whether teaching in the elementary schools of the county or in county high schools, will be based on the following:

Preparation

Graduates of the 8th grade, $75; Graduates of the 8th grade plus one year of high school, $76; Graduates of the 8th grade plus 2 years of high school, $77; Graduates of the 8th grade plus 3 years of high school, $78; Graduates of the 8th grade plus 4 years of high school, $80; Graduates of the 8th grade plus 1 year of normal, $77; Graduates of the 8th grade plus 2 years of normal, $80; Graduates of the 8th grade plus 3 years of normal, $85; Graduates of a 1 year standard high school plus 1 year of normal, $88; Graduates of a 1 year standard high school plus 2 years of normal, $95; Graduates of a 4 year standard high school plus 1 year of college or university, $88; Graduates of a 4 year standard high school plus 2 years of college or university, $95; Graduates of a 4 year standard high school plus 3 years of college or university, $97; Graduates of a 4 year standard high school plus 4 years of college or university, $100. Six weeks or more attendance at a summer school (1922), $5.00.

Under no condition shall any grade teacher receive more than $110.00 per month.

Experience

Three years' successful experience, $3.00; six years' successful experience, $4.00; nine years' successful experience, $5.00.

Under no condition shall any high school teacher receive more than $1,000.00 for 9 months teaching.

Attendance

60 per cent of the census, $2.00; 70 per cent of the census, $3.00; 80 per cent of the census, $4.00; 90 per cent of the census, $5.00.

Supervision, $15.75.

Under no condition shall any High School Principal receive more than $1,500.00 for 9 months.

Adopted by the County Board of Education on the 15th day of May, 1922. JAMES R. ABNER, County Superintendent.

Approved by the State Board of Education on the 25 day of May, 1922. GEORGE COLVIN, State Superintendent.

REMEDY AGAINST LAWN ANTS

To get rid of lawn ants entomologists of the United States Department of Agriculture suggest drenching the nests with boiling water or pouring in a small quantity of kerosene oil. Similar treatment may be applied to nests between or beneath paving stones. Spraying the lawn with kerosene emulsion or with very strong soap wash is also recommended. For large ant nests disulphid of carbon injected into the nest by means of an oil can or a small syringe is recommended to kill the ants. The fumes of disulphid of carbon have a very disagreeable odor and are inflammable, but they are not injurious to higher animals in the open air.

Group eight of the Kentucky Bankers' Association, in session at Crab Orchard, endorsed the work of the Hurley Cooperative Marketing Association and adopted the following resolutions:

"That we approve the method of co-operation known as the California plan and extend to the officers and directors of the Hurley Cooperative Marketing Association our thanks for the masterful way in which its affairs have been managed."

"We believe in the extension of the plan to other commodities than tobacco, and pledge our continued support and co-operation to the farmers and tobacco growers in this district."

Hogs Don't Sweat

—Must Have Shade

Hogs are non-sweating animals and unless they are provided with protection in the form of shade or water for wallowing purposes, they suffer heavily from heat during the hot summer months, live stock men say. Many farmers are using concrete wallowing tanks successfully in keeping their animals cool while others have found shade to be the most practical form of relief on their farms. In either case, it is necessary to provide the animals with plenty of clear drinking water in order to keep down the suffering from heat most effectively.

If there are no trees in the pasture to provide shade, a good shelter from the sun may be constructed by setting short posts in the ground and building a roof of light boards over these. The boards should be nailed down to prevent their being blown away by the wind. If the owner wishes the building for permanent shade rafters can be set up and the structure made more complete.

A shed-roof type of building 14 feet long and five and one-half feet high in front sloping down to three and one-half feet high in the rear has given satisfactory results on the Kentucky Agricultural Experiment Station farm, swine specialists of the station say. No sides are put on the building as free circulation of air is desired.

When concrete wallowing tanks are used in keeping hogs cool, a small amount of oil should be placed in the water to keep the animals free from lice. Care should be taken to see that wallows of all kinds are kept clean.

Big Causes of Loss

In Stock Shipments

Heavy losses resulting each summer from injury, death and shrinkage in shipments of livestock are caused largely by improper methods of handling the animals at shipping points, marketing specialists at the College of Agriculture say. Anything which adds to the comfort of animals in transit diminishes the danger of losses, their suggestions on shipping point out.

"Before having animals placed in them, cars should be cleaned carefully and bedded with sand or some other similar bedding, the use of these being preferable to straw, sawdust and shavings," D. G. Carl, one of the specialists said. "Stock will reach the market in better condition if fed the usual amount of dry feed instead of being fed excessively just before shipping. Clubs, whips and poles should be eliminated as far as possible in loading animals as the use of these causes bruises and a consequent loss of meat."

"About twenty-two 1,000-pound teams may be loaded safely in a standard 36-foot car, he said. Danger of losses may be reduced by partitioning off bulls, vicious animals with horns, calves and cows with calves. Cattle fed on dry feeds a day or two previous to shipment will reach market in better condition than those allowed to fill up on water and grass."

From 80 to 100 hogs depending upon their size may be shipped in a single deck standard 36-foot car, from 16,000 to 17,000 pounds making a good carload in hot weather. In summer the bedding for hogs should be drenched thoroughly with water and in extremely hot weather, from five to 800 pounds of ice should be broken up and placed on the floor of the car or hung up in sacks. It is best to give them dry feed before shipping instead of filling them with water and swell as is often the case.

From 125 to 150 lambs may be loaded safely in a single deck standard 36-foot car.

Drainage of Farm Land
Getting Added
Attention

With the decrease in the cost of tile, Kentucky farmers this year have shown more interest in the drainage of their fields than they have in any one of the past three or four years, according to Earl G. Welch, farm engineering specialist of the College of Agriculture. In line with this marked interest twelve demonstrations have been arranged by the college extension division on as many farms in eight different counties of the State to point out the value of drainage to interested persons, he said.

Warren, Madison, Rockcastle and Carroll counties each have two such demonstrations while Muhlenburg, Hart, Webster and Jefferson counties each have one. Additional demonstrations probably will be arranged in co-operation with farmers in other counties in the near future.

"It is impossible to bring soil up to the highest state of fertility without good drainage," Mr. Welch pointed out in speaking of the projects.

"When land is poorly drained or not drained at all, every quality necessary for a fertile soil is either wholly or partially destroyed. Poor drainage lowers the availability of all the plant food elements by preventing the proper circulation of air through the soil and prevents good structure characterized by the 'crumbiness' that is necessary for easy working of the soil and the development of plant root systems. It also prevents the proper decomposition of organic matter and the consequent formation of compounds of nitrogen and other elements which are available as plant food."

"Heaving, or freezing out of winter crops, also is favored by poor drainage. If poorly drained land has good under drainage for the obvious reason that more water must be carried away by surface drainage. Many sloping lands have poor under drainage. A striking characteristic of poorly drained soil is a tight, whitish or grayish subsoil, often containing brown or rust colored spots. The installation of the tile drainage is the only remedy that can be applied to such soils."

A DIET OF LONGEVITY

Recipe of Woman Whose Forefathers Lived to be 150

It may interest your readers to hear of a system of diet which is that of the early world when people lived hundreds of years without growing old. I heard of it while traveling in Asia Minor from an Armenian woman of 60 of very youthful appearance. Traditions on diet and long life had been preserved in her family from very ancient times.

Her father had lived to 150 and her grandfather and her grandmother, also. She attributed her youth to certain laws of diet and a particular sweetmeat, a kind of sweep paste, which she claimed was one of the foods of the patriarchs and enabled them to live to their great age. It prolongs youth and retards old age, and is made from two of the life-preserving foods mixed with honey and other ingredients. She believed that old age and disease were due to wrong combinations of food, and that a longer youth can be achieved by keeping as strictly as possible to the diet of the ancient world.

She divided food into three classes—the life-giving, containing the proteins, fats and carbohydrates, the life-preserving, only six in number: wine, olive oil, yohort (fermented milk), butter, honey and dates, and the life-destroying, five in number, which should never be consumed, and consist of flesh of meat, tea, coffee, beer and spirits. Her own diet consisted of whole meal bread, eggs, vegetables, some of each of these life-preserving foods, and lentils, and at the mid-day and evening meals some of the sweetmeat, the latter being a very essential part of the diet. She claims that it is possible to maintain youth and vigor up to a very long time on this diet.

I have tried it now for seven months, eating only very little fish and fowl. I have grown much stronger; my friends tell me I look much younger, and I have entirely got rid of a troublesome throat affection and cough which I suffered from for years, and which I always feared would develop into consumption. Medicine and an operation failed to do me any good, but this diet seems to have eliminated the germs from my system, for I am entirely cured.

There are such a number of systems nowadays that one is apt to think very little of them, but I can testify that this system will yield the fullest results, only it must be conscientiously carried out, and whatever else is eaten, the life-destroying foods should be given up.—M. E. Forbes, in Saturday Review.

BEET NEMATODES SPREAD BY DIRT

Refuse From Dumps Apparently Is Most Common Means of Spreading Parasites.

CROP ROTATION IS FAVORED

When Pests Are Found in Locality, Action Should Be Taken by Whole Community to Prevent Spread—Some Good Rules.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Dirt from the beet dumps apparently is the most common means of spreading the sugar beet nematode and should be the first to receive attention in planning control measures, according to Farmers' Bulletin 1248, The Sugar Beet Nematode in the Western States, prepared by Gerald Thorne and L. A. Giddings and now ready for distribution by the United States Department of Agriculture.

Prevent Scattering Soil.
Since the removal of dirt from the dumps seems to be the only practical method of disposing of the thousands of tons of soil annually screened from the beets, says the bulletin, precautions must be taken to prevent scattering the soil containing nematodes. Wagon boxes should be tight enough to prevent soil jarring out along the roads and in the fields. Dump dirt should be disposed of in holes, swamps, or waste corners where there is the least danger of its being scattered.

The practice of growing beets year after year on the same field gives the nematodes an excellent opportunity of becoming established if they are once introduced. A definite system of crop rotation is said to be advisable with not more than two years of beets in succession. The fertility of the soil will thus be maintained, and much of the danger from insect pests and plant diseases will be avoided at the same time.

Make It Community Affair.

When nematodes are found in a locality, action should immediately be taken to prevent their spread, the bulletin advises. This should be made a community affair, and the following measures are being adopted by some of the farm bureaus.

The sugar company operating in the district is requested to refuse contracts for beets grown on soil that is known to be infested with the sugar beet nematode.

When infested soil happens to be planted the owner and the sugar company are to make arrangements for handling the beets from the infested areas separately and not allow the infested beets to go through the dumps while other beets are being handled.

The practice of throwing dump dirt along public highways should be prohibited, by law if necessary.

Copies of the bulletin may be had free by making a request to the United States Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C.

FRESHENING TIME IMPORTANT

Has Considerable to Do With Amount of Profit Cow Returns—Fall Is Favored.

The time of the year that a cow freshens has considerable to do with the profit she returns. An analysis of the figures obtained from many co-testing associations shows that in most sections the cows that freshen during the fall and early winter produce the most milk and butter fat, and bring in the greatest profit over cost of feed.

BUY ONLY BEST DAIRY COWS

Selection of Most Profitable Produces at Start Determines Success of Herd.

The profit to be made from a dairy herd depends largely upon the selection of good dairy cows to start with. It requires from 75 to 75 per cent of the feed a cow is capable of consuming to maintain her body. It is therefore much cheaper to produce, say, 10 gallons of milk with ten cows than with 15 cows.

Seedmen May Study in Government Laboratories

Persons interested in learning the approved methods of testing commercial seeds are offered the facilities of the United States Department of Agriculture in Washington, without charge. Although the department does not pretend to conduct a seed school with outlined courses and classes, it has for a number of years permitted a few people to study in the Government seed-testing laboratories, and in July and August an expert in seed testing devotes his time to helping them.

Those who have taken advantage of the opportunity in past years have been in most instances the sons of seedmen or young men and women sent out by seed companies to learn the best methods that have been developed. The number taking up the work usually ranges from 5 to 15, and thus far the department has been able to care for all applicants.

These students become familiar with crop seeds, seed adulterants, weed seeds, and other foreign materials frequently found in commercial seeds. They are shown also how to make detailed analyses for purity and how to test seeds for germination. If a seedman has a special problem arising out of the peculiarities of his business, he is given every possible aid in solving it. The department welcomes the opportunity to give those who know the commercial side of the seed business additional knowledge of its technical aspects. It is an effective way to improve the quality of seeds sold to farmers and, consequently, to improve yields.

Persons who contemplate taking up this work this season should plan, if possible, to start about July 1st.

BUILT BETTER than Cars that Cost More-

A CAREFUL analysis of the construction and complete equipment of the Light-Six will convince you that it has no duplicate in value in the light car class.

For instance, the machining of the crankshaft and connecting rods on all surfaces is a manufacturing practice that is found only on costlier cars.

This particular operation is mainly responsible for the fine balance of the Light-Six motor and its remarkable freedom from vibration at all speeds. It also has an important bearing on the wearing quality of the car and on its long-lived dependable service.

The exceptional values in the Light-Six are possible because practically every part that goes into the car is manufactured complete in the most modern plant in the world. Parts-makers' profits are practically eliminated. Important savings through better methods and bigger volume permit greater value to the buyer.

From the standpoint of shrewd investment you should find out why the Light-Six offers you so much more for your money in performance, service and economy.

How to Feed and Care For The Household Chameleon

Time was when the changeable little lizard known as the chameleon—Anolis carolinensis—was an object to ornament a lady's coat or to keep in the library as a household pet. In some climates chameleons are used in capturing flies, ants, and other insects, being liberated for this purpose inside screened houses in summer-time. During the winter months suitable facilities for hibernation of the chameleons are necessary.

Many inquiries concerning the care, food, and habits of chameleons have come to the United States Department of Agriculture. The Bureau of Biological Survey has therefore compiled information concerning this little animal for the benefit of those who wish to try it as a pet. A box 2 or 3 feet long is recommended as a cage. It should have its open end covered with glass, mosquito netting, or a fine-meshed wire screening. A small shallow bowl containing a water hyacinth, a Chinese sacred filly, or some other plant should be provided inside the cage and a little water sprayed over the leaves of the plant at least once a day, otherwise the chameleon may die of thirst. Chameleons normally secure what water they want by lapping droplets on leaves. They may not be willing to touch water in a pan. Sweetened water should not be given.

Chameleons are entirely insectivorous and in captivity may be fed on flies and meal worms. The latter may be purchased from dealers or raised, and a supply of cockroaches will prove a valuable source of food. Where cockroaches are a pest chameleons may prove helpful in reducing their numbers.

THE DEAN

By MOLLIE MATHER

Copyright, 1921 Western Newspaper Union

We girls had been the happiest little crowd until Della Warren came among us. She was visiting the Livingstons when we met her, and after that, she and her snobbish old aunt came and rented the Hallie's flat, the Hallies were south for the winter. As a rule, we girls welcome a stranger, and try to make her enjoy herself. But if Della Warren needed any one's assistance in enjoying herself, I hadn't noticed it. The trouble was she let nothing stand in the way of her enjoyment; other people's hurt feelings or things like that did not give her the slightest concern. In fact, we learned later that hurt feelings were part of Miss Cella's enjoyment, yes, really. Else why did she walk Dora Harris' beloved Billy up and down before the Harr home, after she had unfairly taken him away from Dora?

That was why we heartily disliked Cella Warren when we knew her unfairness. Perhaps she reasoned that "all is fair in love and war." But she had not been with us a month before we were quarreling with each other—we who had been so peacefully chummy.

Dora and Billy were the first to separate. It seemed that Cella Warren told Billy things which he should have known true little Dora never said. And the last to drop each other's society were Ted and I, and I never would have believed that Ted could be such a goose.

When Ted started out in business, I wasn't a bit surprised that he asked me to marry him, while Dad agreed, cheerfully and resignedly, as a matter of course.

But like Dora and Billy, and Nell and her Jackie, Ted and I had decided not to announce our engagement until nearer the somewhat distant marriage time.

Then all at once Cella Warren blew in like a mischievous cyclone and asked things all up.

"Sally dear," Cella Warren said to me with her annoying, amused smile, "Why in the world do you let Ted Loring be so dead sure of your affection for him. If a man were as sure and conceited about his power over me, I'd show him, I would. Why, when he was talking to me at the party last night I said, jokingly, 'You'd better go and find Sally or some other hand-some man will take her to supper,' and Ted laughed, a queer sort of laugh it was and said, 'Oh, I will find Sally alright, just where I left her.' That new Le Strange man has a bit of crush on you, too, Sally," Cella added, "though it would be hard to make your Ted believe that."

So I did just what Nell and Dora had done under the same provocation—I determined to show Ted Loring that he need not be so conceitedly sure of me, after all. I talked to that Le Strange man so long at our next gathering that he insisted upon taking me into supper, while Ted walked off laughing, with Cella Warren.

So she added another conquest—and and had another man, as days passed, leaning over the piano jolting with her as she played, while we three deserted girls sat, like wall flowers, back on the divan.

"If Jackie only would not take in everything that girl says," lamented Nell. "He wouldn't attach himself to her train if it wasn't in pique against me."

Gentle Dora's tone was actually spiteful. "When Cella Warren talks about the wonderful places she has been and the noted people who entertained her and the great musicians whom she accompanies, well, I just wish I could face her with her lie."

Nell sat up.

"That's it," she exclaimed wrathfully. "If we could show those inebriate unhappy boys that she is untruthful in one thing, they might guess that she's been untruthful too, concerning us."

The music ceased abruptly and Cella Warren swung around on the piano stool.

"Fine," she praised my obtuse Ted, "you sing as well as George." George was being lionized in our town just then.

"Did you every hear the Dean of Hampton sing, Miss Warren?" I suddenly asked.

"Probably not, Hampton was our college. Dora, Nell and I went through together."

"The Dean is really celebrated as a singer. You took up music, I believe, you said, at our Hampton one year? Of course then, you know Donn Gordon."

"Oh, yes," Cella Warren answered carelessly.

She looked up at the three boys impressively.

"I have often played for him," she told them. "And he was mighty good-looking. Such wonderful dark eyes. He used to take me around a lot, though it wasn't in accordance with college rules. You see, I had the happy excuse of playing his accompaniments."

It was then that I stood up dramatically.

"Which," I remarked clearly, "is all very strange, Miss Warren, inasmuch as the Dean of Hampton college is a woman, a small blonde woman, Elizabeth Gordon."

It was mean and stooping to Cella Warren's level, too, but there are times when a lesson is necessary. And I must admit that there was no regret in our crowd when Miss Cella moved on to an adjacent town and we resumed our old happy ways.

REMINISCENCES

By GLADIS F. PRAY

© 1922, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate

It is a common thing for middle-aged people to forget their youth and to condemn all the thoughts and acts of youth as folly. Sometimes, as these people pass middle age and reach the point where they see that even the history of families truly repeats itself, their judgment mellow and their sympathy with youth returns. This would have been brought home very forcibly to any person listening to the discussion that took place in the Armstrong farmhouse kitchen on a sunny morning last fall. I had it on the best authority, that of Granddad Armstrong himself.

Of course, there was a long introduction to his story. Then he rambled on to how he had the time and opportunity to observe how things were going between Anne and his grandson and namesake, William Armstrong.

Finally he reached the point where his story begins, the morning after the dance over at Rosedale, when William came down, sleepy-eyed and yawning, to find his father engaged with his favorite topic, the worthlessness of the present generation, especially on the farm, and his determination that his son must give up "lolly-gagging" around with that "ere Anne Marshbanks and get down to brass tacks."

As is usual with mothers, Mary Armstrong was trying to smooth things over, but was not succeeding very well.

As William reached the kitchen door his father was just delivering his ultimatum.

"I tell you, Mary, there's no use arguing; I told the boy only last week he'd have to give it up, else he could get out and shift for himself and just find out how easy he'd find it to support himself, let alone two."

Here William spoke for himself.

"And I told you, pa, what I tell you now. I'd get out and glad to, except for mother. You've no call to make such a fuss over me takin' Anne to a dance now and again. I work hard for you all day, harder than any hired hand you ever had, and—"

"Hush, Willie!" from the mother. "Your father has worked hard for years that you might have this place clear of debt when you grow up."

"Yes, and small thanks I get for it, too."

"Now, don't you get to thinkin' I'm sidin' with you, pa, for I'm not," interposed Mrs. Armstrong.

"Anyway, as pa says, there's no use arguing about it, and as long as he feels the way he does the sooner I clear out and get a start for myself the better," said Willie. "I'll take just what I need in the suitcase and catch the 6:29 from the Center. I'm glad I saved the money granddad gave me for my birthday. That will start me, anyway."

"Yes, and once that's gone, you'll find that trees in city parks don't bear greenbacks, me lad—"

A low chuckle broke in from the corner, where granddad, who had puffed placidly on his ancient pipe during the debate, now raised his venerable head and regarded his son with a quizzical air.

"No, indeed, money don't grow on the bushes in city parks, William, and no one knows that better than your father. Now, I wonder, did he ever tell you how he learned that? Maybe it 'ud be a bit hard for him to tell you, but there's your mother knows all about it, and could say a deal if she dast. No? I can see by their faces they never did tell. Well, old people are forgetful, so perhaps I'd best remind them."

"Now, John, don't interrupt your father, nor you, Mary. You know, William, once on a time I thought your pa had a smart better to do than to be squirin' a certain good-lookin' girl to dances, but he didn't think so, away, no! We had some words about it, and he packed his duds and started off for Boston on some money his grandma give him. He was goin' to show his dad what he could do. Yes, he showed me all right," with an appreciative grin. "He risky'd a fair lady in trouble on the Boston train, and she risky'd his wallet, so the money trees on Boston Common didn't bloom for him that year."

As granddad subdued John rather sheepishly glanced at his wife, who suddenly needed something in the pantry. Then he cleared his throat, made a couple of false starts, and finally jerked out:

"Well, granddad, you would have your say, but I hope you'll forget that old yarn. If we agree to say no more about the party. If Billy promises not to be out ruinin' his health more than two nights a week, I guess the old farm won't go to rack and ruin yet awhile—that is, if he makes the best of his chance—as I did, and persuades the girl to come and live where he won't have to be chasin' out nights. What do you say to that, Mary?"

Mary only smiled, but her husband did not notice the lack of an articulate response.

Considerate.

"Would you mind driving a little slower, old man?"

"Not getting scared, are you?"

"Oh, no, nothing like that, but I'd hate to take an unfair advantage of my life insurance company."

Not a Hopeless Task.

He—You are Miss Coy's best friend. Tell me, do you think I will be successful in winning her love?

She—Yes; why shouldn't you, when so many others have been successful?

To Users Of Gasoline and Motor Oils

You've too much at stake in your motor equipment to be "spoofed" by mere claims about this or that thing in a gasoline or motor oil.

High-sounding technical terms don't insure you all the pep, power, mileage, safety and satisfaction you are entitled to in a motor fuel or lubricant.

But the word "Standard" does. And that's why it is the buy-word and the stand-by of the biggest users of gasoline and oils everywhere.

You can't "spoof" the big users. They know the dependability of the Standard Oil products and the responsibility of the Company back of them.

They know that if there were a better gasoline than New Crown or a better motor oil than Polarine, the Standard Oil Company would have it for them.

But "there aint no sich animal," no matter who says there is.

So good, so uniform, so dependable and so economical is New Crown

Gasoline that it is universally called "The Perfect Motor Fuel." It's even better than the requirements specified by the U. S. Government.

New Crown is made right here in Kentucky by a Kentucky firm, the Standard Oil Company (Kentucky) in its own refinery at Louisville, from which you get it fresh at all times—a firm that for 36 years has been a vital part of the business activities of the state of Kentucky and the economical life of its people.

Don't be "Spoofed"—Buy the "Always Reliable"

Standard Oil Products—New Crown Gasoline, Polarine Oils and Greases, back of which is a responsibility that is your guarantee of maximum pep, power, safety and satisfaction. And buy them from these, your own home dealers:

Poisoned Bait

Successful Measures Against Cutworms

Cutworms can readily be controlled by the use of poisoned bait. The United States Department of Agriculture has demonstrated. This is the way to prepare and apply the poison. To one bushel of dry add one pound of white arsenic or Paris green and mix thoroughly into a mash with 4 gallons of water, in which has been stirred one-half gallon of sorghum or other cheap molasses. This amount will be sufficient to treat 4 or 5 acres of cultivated crops. After the mash has stood for several hours scatter it in lumps of about the size of a marble over the fields where the injury is beginning to appear. Put it about the bases of the plants which have been set out. Apply the mash late in the day, so as to have the poison in place around the plants before night, when the cutworms are active. Apply a second time if necessary. Cutworms destroy hundreds of thousands, even millions, of dollars' worth of crops every year throughout the United States. They especially attack tomatoes, cabbage, lettuce, and other vegetables that have been started under glass and transplanted. Cutworms sometimes appear in great numbers in the spring and early summer, and frequently do severe injury before their ravages are noticed. Their method of attack is to cut off the young plants near the ground. They are of large size and are voracious feeders, capable of destroying many plants in a single night. Often they cut down more than they can devour.

SAVE MONEY WHEN YOUNG ENJOY IT IN AFTER LIFE

Young men who would enter the decline of life in comfortable circumstances should begin to save now. The approved modern method of saving is a savings account in the home bank. This bank invites young men and young women to join its family of savings depositors. One dollar opens a savings account, and any sum may be deposited thereafter.

Bred Sows

NEED GAIN IN WEIGHT BEFORE FARROWING

After being bred and before farrowing, mature brood sows should gain from 75 to 80 pounds in weight, swine breeders say. The gains made by yearlings during the summer should be more than this. These gains not only insure strong pigs and a good flow of milk after farrowing but also offset the loss in weight of the sow during the farrowing and succeeding suckling period. "During the first ten weeks following breeding, the sows should have enough grass or forage crops such as clover, alfalfa, Sudan grass, rape and oats to make any grain feed unnecessary," E. J. Wilford, a swine specialist of the College of Agriculture pointed out. "This not only will result in economy of feeding but also will be the means of giving animals sufficient exercise and providing them with more healthful surroundings." "During the last six weeks of the gestation period, it will be necessary to give the sows a small amount of grain feed. As much as feed will depend largely upon the amount of extra flesh the animals are carrying. The judgment of the feeder will determine how much is to be given at any one time. Regardless of the amount of grain fed, some protein supplement such as tankage, linseed oil meal, shorts or middlings should be applied. "Ordinarily, sows which have lost their place in the breeding herd should be fattened before they are sent to market. Thirty days of intensive feeding will put them in condition to sell at a sufficient advantage to more than pay for the cost of fattening. In that time a mature sow would gain from 60 to 80 pounds. Gains on sows which are to be sent to market should require not more than five and one-half pounds of grain for every pound of gain, which with the usual prices, would insure a good profit for fattening." Success breeds confidence until it is misused. The worst of our worries are over things that never happen.

THE NEW FAMILY

By JULIA A. ROBINSON

The little village of Linton was filled with excitement. A new family was to move into the place, a rare event for that remote country town.

The Coney farm, as it was called, had long been vacant, and rundown. Now a new owner was coming, and interest ran high.

"His name's Jenkins," Mrs. Jones informed her neighbors. She had been making inquiries about the expected newcomers. "They've been living down in the city. He's got a wife but she's slim, and five children."

All were eager to see the new family arrive. Some of the women even went down to the small flag station. The whistle sounded, the train came to a stop, and the new family alighted, all of them. A trunk, well strapped, was set down on the platform, a box and a bag.

"He's got a buggy," whispered Mrs. True. "Ain't it fine? The rest of the things must be coming later."

Mr. Jenkins looked about on his new neighbors, a broad smile on his face that won their hearts. He seemed a jolly sort of man, good-natured.

"Any of you got a horse I can borrow?" he asked. "My wife here isn't able to walk. My buggy came, but I need a horse."

"You're welcome to take one of ours," quickly responded Mrs. Clouson.

Mrs. Clouson soon returned. Mr. Jenkins, with thanks, harnessed the horse to his buggy, filled his family in and drove off.

Mrs. Butler, who lived nearest to the Coney farm, was preparing her supper when there came a knock at the door. There stood one of the Jenkins children.

"I've come to see if you can lend him a bit of wood," she asked. "Ain't that, she wants a soap and a little flour?"

"To be sure, dear," responded Mrs. Brown.

In the morning another child came with the request. "Could you lend me a loaf of bread and a few potatoes, and I'll be sure to send you a good one."

After a few days the neighbors began to talk among themselves.

"It's about time these things of theirs came," I say," observed Mrs. Jones. "The things they've borrowed of me and haven't returned, I couldn't tell you."

"Why I thought I was the only one who lent 'em things," cried Mrs. Brown.

"The only one? Not much," cried several voices. "I've lent 'em things every day."

"Me, too," echoed Mrs. Gibbs. "They have borrowed my washboard and soap bucket, tin plates, even, and they never return a thing till I go after it. Not always then, especially if it's something to eat. I'm bound to get it."

"They borrowed my husband's shovel, his oven and plough. I can't be really contented unless a new owner, but to borrow them themselves," said another.

"It's too expensively, but what can we do?" asked Mrs. Brown.

"They talked the matter over for days. At last they decided on a plan they thought must be effective to work a cure in the new family. Mrs. Jones was the first one to put it into effect. Mrs. Jenkins came over, as usual and asked, "Can you lend me six eggs and a cup of sugar and a little butter? I'm making a cake."

"Certainly," beamed Mrs. Jones, bringing the desired articles.

In half an hour the child came back. "These eggs are all eaten. Ma can't use 'em, she complained, 'and the sugar's got sand in it, and the butter don't taste good."

"Sorry," exclaimed Mrs. Jones. "Those eggs were all I had. I remember the sugar got spilled on the boys' scraped up. Spore they scraped up a bit of sand with it. Can't be helped now. Ask your ma to please excuse it this time."

"The scheme was working well with Mrs. Jenkins, but how were the men to manage Mr. Jenkins? That was a more difficult matter and far more serious.

"Good morning, Neighbor Jones," Mr. Jenkins accosted with his usual smile. "Just lend me your harrow. I've gotter go over my land."

It hurt Mr. Jones to take the screws from his new harrow, for he knew it would fall to pieces, and it would take a good day to repair it, but for the sake of the cause he did it.

In short measure Mr. Jenkins came back, not smiling this time.

"What's the matter with the old thing?" he inquired.

"Why—why—it's broken," cried Mr. Jones. "Ain't I was a new one, too. May be I can fix it, but 'twill take a lot of time."

It was the same with everything Jenkins tried to do. Everything he borrowed fell to pieces.

It went on for a few days. Nothing that the Jenkins family tried to borrow was in working order. At last they began to understand.

"Mebby we'd better go an' buy a few things for ourselves," said Mr. Jenkins to his wife. "Folks seem to be tired of lendin'."

"Ain't that what I told you?" rejoined his wife. "You just go to town an' buy in a stock of things, an' we'll give 'em back everything they've ever lent us. Now get!"

"Guess we've cured 'em of the borrowin' habit, all right!" chuckled Mrs. Jones, and the real laughed.

Dr. J. Hartman, Scranton, Pa., says: "With my first two children I had a doctor and a nurse and then they had to use instruments, but with my last two children I used Mother's Friend and had only a nurse; we had no time to get a doctor because I wasn't very sick—only about ten or fifteen minutes."

Only Cultural Methods

Can Control Webworms in Corn

Outbreaks of webworms in corn in the Middle Eastern States can be prevented only by cultural methods, according to the Bureau of Entomology of the United States Department of Agriculture. Unlike most of our destructive pests, the various species of webworms are all natives of America and have not been introduced from foreign lands.

Summer or very early fall plowing should be practiced. Plowing in late October or November has little effect because the worms are already in their winter webs under the surface of the ground. Land that has been in soil or pasture, or lain fallow and grown up to weeds and grass should be plowed in July or August, the soil and plant it to some immune if it is intended to plant it to corn crop.

the following spring.

Grass lands of all kinds—meadows, pastures, or lawns—furnish the normal food of soil webworms, but they also gnaw young corn plants below the surface and deform them so as to prevent the production of grain. After the corn is once planted and the field is found to be infested there is no practicable method of getting rid of the worms; the only thing that can be done is to produce conditions that will permit the corn to grow in spite of them.

Disking in the spring, the application of fertilizer, and the sowing of sound seed are the chief preventive measures that will have any effect. Neither poisoning nor trapping has met with any success. Injury to grasslands is difficult to control and little can be done except to plow up the sod and plant it to some immune if it is intended to plant it to corn crop.

Proper Shade

FOR SHEEP RETURNS LARGE DIVIDENDS

Plenty of the right kind of shade for sheep returns big dividends, farmers and sheep raisers say. Only one or two shade trees in a pasture are worse than none at all since a place to which the sheep come day after day soon becomes a hotbed for parasites, they add. The construction of small shades which can be moved from place to place is solving the difficulty for many Kentucky farmers. A cheap permanent shade constructed by setting posts in the ground to support a roof of boards is giving good results on the Kentucky Agricultural Experiment Station farm. The only objection found with the structure was the fact that the roof let water through in rainy weather and the resting place of the sheep became muddy. This fault can be remedied at a somewhat increased cost by covering the boards with roofing paper. The usefulness of such a shed is increased by placing it on runners or wheels so that it can be moved from place to place.

Let not your right hand know what your left hand doeth. It might feel ashamed.

ARE YOUR CHILDREN EXTRAVAGANT?

To allow a child to become extravagant, no matter how well-off the parents may be, is to seriously interfere with the development of its character.

Extravagance breeds idleness and a lack of appreciation of values. A pampered and over-indulged child can never really experience those joys and pleasures that are the birthright of childhood.

Hail Insurance Rates Reduced on Tobacco

With the recent reductions of hail storm insurance rates on growing tobacco, in the face of the enormous losses to growers within the last four or five years, every grower can afford to protect himself to the limit and, with safety, go into the business of producing a crop that requires so much money, time and labor, as does tobacco, that should be insured against loss by hail storms.

Now that so many growers have gone into an organization for a more economical, business-like way of handling their crops, and the insurance companies have so lowered rates on hail insurance, there is no reason in the world for any grower to neglect the protection of his crop by ample insurance.

Better see your insurance agent right away and have him protect your crop, which is likely to be destroyed any day by a hail storm. Policies become effective noon, July 10th.

Abolish The Tip

A certain class of Americans are nutty on the subject of tipping. They are not only nutty, but they are a nuisance to the rest of mankind.

The tip is an established institution in many of the old countries, but they use their brains as well as their money. Where an American would tip a quarter or a half dollar, the foreigner in his own country would hand over one or two cents. And they get just as much for their copper as the splurger does for his silver.

There ought to be a federal law forbidding tipping of every nature and fixing a jail sentence for both the giver and the receiver.

When a man goes into a hotel and registers he expects to pay the proprietor the established price of his board and lodging. He should not be required to pay also the waiter, and the chambermaid, and the elevator man, and the bellhop in order to secure the attention and service to which every guest is entitled.

Tipping is degrading, to both the giver and the receiver.

It should be abolished by law, since so many do not possess either the brains or the nerve to abolish it by custom.

Free advice is seldom worth its cost.

Keep moving, or the world will run off and leave you.

'Tis fortunate our neighbors never know us as we are. It saves us a lot of unnecessary worry.

WHAT SHE FOUND

By NETTIE S. FANNING

1922, by Nettie S. Fanning, syndicate

Two days before the midwinter banquet of the Cincinnati Literary Society, Mrs. Fleming was finishing the desolate gown which she had planned to wear on that occasion. It was before the time of countless bodices and she was afraid she had been almost too daring in planning that kind of a gown when most of the ladies would wear a "V" neck and their long sleeves "undies" would probably show through their thin or opaque stockings.

Although not fashionable as to clothes, the club was very exclusive and so old that its charter members had grown white-haired or bald-headed, according to their respective sex. It was composed of doctors, lawyers, ministers and their wives, school teachers of varying ages and a few others. There were two bachelors, Mr. Black and Mr. Thibbs, the always immediate principal of the grammar school, thirty-five, pink-checked and six feet two.

Young Mrs. Fleming sighed as she sewed. She wished she could do something to wake up the club. They were too snug and complacent. They had had the same president for 15 years.

A telephone call interrupted Mrs. Fleming's musings. It was the chairman of the banquet committee, who said that Mrs. Warden would be unable to be at the banquet and would Mrs. Fleming please fill in her place on the program.

Mrs. Fleming promised to see what she could do, put on her things and started for the library. On her way she met Miss Davids, a club member and stopped to chat with her. As they passed a few torn scraps of paper slipped unnoticed from Miss Davids' notebook and fell at Mrs. Fleming's feet. She looked down at them, then picked them up, tucked them into her purse and hurried toward home where she spent some time in neatly pasting the pieces together, picture puzzle fashion.

Two nights later the banquet progressed from fruit cocktails to demitasse. Then the ladies were cleared and speeches were in order.

When Mrs. Fleming was called on she arose looked searchingly at Mr. Thibbs until he blushed, then unfolded a disconcerting looking paper, laid it on the table face down and began to read. "Two days ago I started for the library to search for something to read tonight, little thinking that I would soon be unravelling a baffling mystery concerning three of our prominent club members. To say that I have been alternately interested, curious, astonished and shocked at what I have learned faintly expressed my emotions. Before reaching the library I stopped to chat a moment with Miss Davids. After we parted I noticed some bits of paper on the walk. They must have fallen from her notebook as we were talking. On one of the pieces I saw the words, 'exceedingly shocking.'"

Miss Davids' face showed blank amazement. Mrs. Fleming continued: "Now, anything shocking is up to be interesting particularly if it concerns those with whom one is well acquainted."

Several people stirred uneasily in their seats. "It seemed that other bits of paper had fallen, with the writing up. After a hasty glance I simply had to know what it all meant, and gathered up the papers. You will begin to understand why I did this when I repeat to you the words I saw in the order in which I first saw them on the ground. 'EXCEEDINGLY SHOCKING—TILDEN—ROCKING—MISS PENNY—OPEN WORKED STOCKING—MISS ROSS—SAD.'"

Her audience was now listening breathlessly, and consternation showed in the faces of the two middle-aged school-teachers mentioned. Mrs. Fleming went on:

"There were other scraps with words on them. After gathering them up I at once returned home and spent the afternoon in piecing them together."

She looked soberly at the paper on the table and all eyes followed her gaze.

"I thought at first I would say nothing about it; but as the matter so intimately concerns us all, I felt that you too should be told." Every eye was fixed upon her as she took the paper from the table.

"Listen," she said. "Don't anything be more dreadful than this!"

"Miss Ross, Miss Tilden, Miss Penny, white stockings, exceedingly long, Miss Thibbs, white stockings, exceedingly long, Miss Fleming, white stockings, exceedingly long, Miss Ross, white stockings, exceedingly long."

"'Pretty color' mentioned the ladies in the club, our own club, 'White Stockings' had our clubbed attention all night!"

"Someone also must have dropped these papers. I must write that," said Miss Davids a bit sympathetically.

"Isn't that your writing?" Mrs. Fleming smiled innocently and handed the paper to her. Though elaborately stitched together, it was blank on both sides.

Retirement

"Do you not sometimes dream," said the sympathetic friend, "of dismissing all official cares and leading your life your own way?"

"That isn't a dream," said Senator Berghman, a little hesitantly. "That's a nightmare."

Do Your Feet Help You or Hinder You?

Vigorous, healthy feet help you! They make your work seem lighter—they enable you to enjoy things. On the other hand, uncomfortable, strained, aching feet make life a continual drudgery. Ordinary shoes with sagging arches make troublesome feet. Arch Preserver Shoes, because the built-in arch comes up and stays up to the instep, keep the feet well. You can make your feet healthy and vigorous by wearing Arch Preserver Shoes. You'll be delighted with the good, smart styles, too.

HIDE AND SEEK

By MOLLIE MATHER

"I don't see anything interesting about her, or charming either. If that's your heart-crushing maiden Ted, my first impression is, that she's too easily friendly."

This is what Charlotte Winters, coming down the stair overhead one afternoon concerning herself. If Miss Charlotte had come at the same hour upon the following day, she would have heard that same pleading humbly tone withdrawing much of his former statement. But Charlotte did not hear, the amendment, which is often the unfortunate way with gossip. Upon the following afternoon John Ainsworth said to Ted, "Your little Miss Winters is not over friendly Ted, as I, yesterday blithely concluded. She's just absolutely natural. I realize that, as I am in her company, though she is far from paying any attention to my worthy self, which," added John ruefully, "grows disappointing."

"You see," Ted explained, "Charlie has five brothers who are her admiring pals. It was they, who dubbed her Charlie. So she was grown into a way of treating men in a natural manner as good companions."

"She made eyes at me the first day," John, proudly insisted; and Charlie again ascending the stair at the inopportune moment, was in time to hear this last remark.

"Well," she breathed indignantly and dropped upon the stair. Her old friend Ted had given such glowing accounts of this coming former college chum.

"Old John's a wonder," Ted had told her enthusiastically, "highest notch up in his business career, straight, jolly, kind, and unspoiled." Ted added admiringly, "by all the attention women give him. John could take his pick wherever he goes. But does he encourage a girl to believe in a fondness for her which he does not possess? Not old John. Courteous and all that, but goes honestly on his way, until Miss Right comes along. Then—"

"Maybe," Charlie had mischievously interrupted, "I may be that Miss Right. What an honor!"

Such a man was not worth a thought; she would, thereafter, avoid him. A decision once made Charlie Winters invariably lived up to it.

"What," John Ainsworth impatiently asked Ted, "is the matter with your mother's guest? Miss Winters runs from me at every turn, and I admit Ted, that the more I see her with others here, the more I like that girl. Not heart-crushed, you understand nor any foolishness like that, but I do want to know her better, have her talk to me as she talks to those silly loungers who drop in every evening on pretense of visiting yourself. Do I appear more someone than they? or—what is the matter with your tormenting young friend?"

Old John's usually calm tone was sharply impatient. "Who," answered Ted wisely, "may comprehend the mind of a woman?"

It was in the wide hallway that John one evening later, learned the truth, or a part of the truth. By desperate force, he detained Charlie Winters as she was flying past him up the stair. Her small hands were clasped masterfully, and the following tumultuous and amazing conversation ensued. "You shall not run from me always," cried John, trembling earnestly. "What have I done? Why do you dislike me? I love you, love you!" he added astounding himself.

Charlie, snatching away her hands, paused to look back at him tauntingly. "Why, there is nothing interesting about me," she innocently repeated. "Nor charming either. I am merely friendly, even when I do," Miss Charlie gave a charming demonstration, "make eyes at you." Then, she was gone. When John called on the following day, he learned that Miss Winters had left unexpectedly to visit a friend of her mother's in New York city. She had left no address, promising to write. And John Ainsworth—the heretofore staid and deliberate—hurried after. A needle in a haystack? Yes.

But John had to keep hunting. Waiting inactivity would be to him now madness. After he had registered at a New York hotel, John made his wildly hopeful, probably impossible, plan.

In disgust with himself and his hopeless reasonings, John gave up the chase. He would go to the club restaurant for luncheon; his usual haunt when business called him to New York. He had vaguely ordered luncheon when a girlish form slipped into the chair opposite his own. "Charlie!" cried John, boyishly off guard the smiling young woman did not resent that familiarity. Then John poured forth the story of his unsuccessful quest.

"I was wiser than you," said Charlie when the story was told. "I came directly to the place where Ted said I would find you."

"Find me?" questioned John.

"Or rather let you find me," corrected Miss Charlie. Again she smiled. "You see, I had grown tired of hide and seek, myself."

John's hand captured her's beneath the table cloth. "Charlie dear," he whispered, "and I have found you then, to keep?"

"If I'm not too uninteresting," began Charlie, then relented, in a smile.

Lime Makes

Clover Crop

There is a clover on Will English's farm outside of Elizabethtown which surpasses anything of the kind ever grown in Harlan county. It is grown on land which several years ago would hardly produce one ton of clover to the acre. This season it will produce three tons if not four. This information is given our readers because it is the result of lime. Dr. F. P. Strickler, when he owned this farm, put on this field four tons of lime to the acre.—Elizabethtown News.

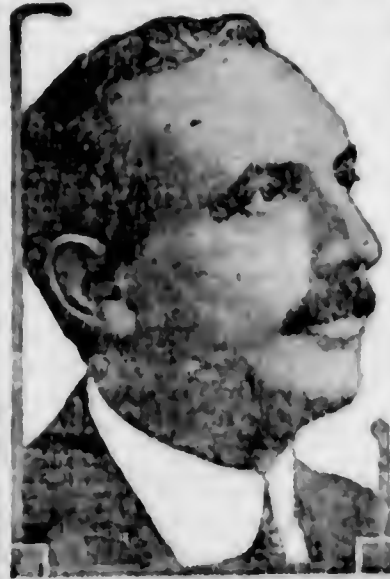

DR. H. A. ADRIAN TO LECTURE HERE

Address Will Set Forth Powerfully Achievements of the Great Plant Wizard.

DR. HENRY A. ADRIAN

produced. He will also tell of the astonishing wonders that Mr. Burbank is working today.

Doctor Adrian uses the development of plant life as a plea for the development of child life as well—for cleaner and better homes and for better heroes to place before our school children. According to Doctor Adrian, the achievements of Thomas A. Edison and Luther Burbank place them among our greatest heroes today.

Hail Insurance Rates Reduced on Tobacco

With the recent reductions of hail storm insurance rates on growing tobacco, in the face of the enormous losses to growers within the last four or five years, every grower can afford to protect himself to the limit and, with safety, go into the business of producing a crop that requires so much money, time and labor, as does tobacco, that should be insured against loss by hail storms.

Now that so many growers have gone into an organization for a more economical, business-like way of handling their crops, and the insurance companies have so lowered rates on hail insurance, there is no reason in the world for any grower to neglect the protection of his crop by ample insurance.

Better see your insurance agent right away and have him protect your crop, which is likely to be destroyed any day by a hail storm. Policies become effective noon, July 10th.

"Oh, very pleasantly," said Bartlett. "There was a vein of rationalism running through all that verbiage culminated at times, it is true, in never wholly lost."

The Race Victory at INDIANAPOLIS The Road Victory at WICHITA Help You Choose Tires

500 miles at 94.48 miles an hour—a relentless grind over a rough-finished, sun-baked concrete and brick pavement at record-breaking speed—that is the gruelling test Oldfield Cord Tires underwent successfully at Indianapolis Speedway May 30th. They were on the winner's car for the third successive year and on eight of the ten finishing in the money, upholding the confidence successful race drivers have in the trustworthiness and ability of these tires to meet the greatest demands of speed, endurance and safety. Their records in every other important race have been equally as good.

Consider this achievement along with another test of Oldfield quality made at Wichita, Kansas, this past winter and early spring.

34,525 miles on rutted, icy Kansas roads, running day and night on a Studebaker stock car without a single tire change. This test was made by a group of Wichita automobile dealers in a tire, oil and gasoline economy run.
Mayor Kemp of Wichita was official observer and made affidavit to the mileage and service given by Oldfield tires.

You may never subject your tires to the gruelling experience of Indianapolis nor the steady grind of bad winter roads, but it is good to know you can get such safety and mileage economy by buying Oldfield tires. Ask your nearest dealer.

The Cream

Station Song

(By J. D. Steenberg)

Oh, I love to think of the days when we were young.
And it don't seem so very long ago,
But our heads are getting gray,
And our limbs are not so strong,
So we're working, testing cream to get along.

(Chorus)

If you want to keep those old folks,
Bring a can of cream.
For I hope to please you all with my song.
Oh, just bring a can of cream and try
For I'm sure she'll test it high,
For we're working, testing cream
to get along.

Oh, I love to think of the days when we were young.
When our lives were blessed with plenty and so gay;
But misfortune came our way,
And it brought us here today,
A working, testing cream to get along.

Oh, I love to think of today,
While all have passed away;
Yet we love each other dearly just the same,
For our love it came to stay,
And we're happy as can be,
A working, testing cream to get along.

Throwing Salt.
The custom of throwing a pinch of salt over the left shoulder three times to break the "curse" is a pagan survival of the times when salt was one of the offerings to the evil deities who sent bad luck.

Big Platinum Yield.
Practically from a single district the Lombia produces an average of almost troy ounces of platinum annually.

What Eyes Indicate
Round eyes, pinched in expression, indicate generosity and kindness. Large blue eyes, clear and almost transparent, are signs of great ability and sensitiveness. They also indicate a jealous disposition.
